

Hilda and Penny

They've been bosom pals since high school, sharing everything together, boys, records and often the same bed. They're so close to being inseparable that their friends all comment that one doesn't look natural apart from the other.

Nor do they care if the men who see them expressing their mutual affection in public, holding hands, hugging, kissing, etcetera, look at them sceptically. "Who cares anyway. A man," observes Hilda, "we can always have. But what Penny and I have together transcends anything as prosaic as man-woman love."

Whatever the particulars to Hilda and Penny's love may be, no one can deny that a prettier pair you are not likely to find . . .

These girls are all members of a new kind of living club, Japanese girls...and more popular on the west coast. They're called Adult Fun Clubs. Actually they're apartments with the emphasis on romping and fun rather than the old idea of closing in somewhere and closing your door.

RAVISHING ROOMMATES

There are game rooms, sauna baths, tennis courts, volley ball courts, tables for ping pong, outdoor beaches for cool-offs, and the young in heart and spirit have taken to these new-style experiments in fun, making each night one of fun and revelry, with nobody sitting home alone and brooding.

There are club rooms for discussions, rooms for art classes, billiard rooms, and a big Olympic-size pool for the aquatic-minded. There are enough men to go around too, all under 35, and with only that restriction in force, all entertaining bats are open.

No married couples are allowed, no children howling for their hurts or miseries. In short — a paradise in living, right in the heart of things. A huge double-decker garage shelters the apartment dwellers' cars and the only new thing that will be added is a stage and small theater to allow those who want to be Thespians to get their socks

Some of the girls are TV stars, others are in the modeling field, a great many are in the ordinary pursuits, working in offices for their keeps. But when the whistle blows at five, these gals all sit back hard, waiting for that friendly phone to ring, or the doorbell chimes to announce that thugs are about to get started, a new party is being planned, and to shag out of that 9-to-5 stuff and slip into something comfortable!

And as you can see, they all love it!

SULTRY ODD COUPLE

The two lovely young ladies pictured in various poses on these pages met while Janice was a secretary at an Eastern stock broker's firm. They hit it off right away and were seen everywhere together, eventually deciding to become roommates.

Inevitably, they got stuck with obnoxious roommates. Because Janice was always the more dominant of the two, she was called "Bull," and Jan inherited the epithet, "Bear." The allusion to the stock market is only too obvious.

Many's the time in the heat of the active business day that the cry "Bull!" goes up, and an outside observer is unable to discern whether the stock market is rising, or Janice is being called, or if there's an outspoken skeptic in the group!

But it's really a minor problem, and something that Jan and Janice have learned to put up with. Admittedly, they have their ups and downs, but on the average, they take stock of the relationship often enough to keep it strong.

Obviously, they have much in common, and there is never any worry that their apartment is too crowded. Sure, they get in each other's way every once in a while, but then, who's to say just how many of those apparently accidental touches and collisions aren't really planned?

Bare in mind that they are roommates, and roommates are much closer than just friends. And that's no bull.

TORRID TWOSOME

You probably have it in your mind that just about any girl who poses in the nude or even semi-nude, has got to be a pretty bold girl. It just figures. After all, she's revealing her body to millions of anonymous readers. It's kind of hard to have too much modesty or even reluctance at this stage of the game.

Such was not the case with the two tweens so attractively gracing these printed pages. Admittedly, they don't look tired. They seem to be right at home with each other and in front of each other and in front of the cameras. But brother, if you only knew the hassle we had to go through to get to this point.

You see, neither of them had ever posed with another girl before, at least in the extreme manner we wanted them to pose. It wasn't that they had anything against doing it—they were never any problem there—it was just that being the first time, they were quite timid and shy.

So, we had to coax them, and baby them along, and say nice things to them, until they warmed to the task. They spent fully a half-hour merely getting acquainted before we started shooting pictures. By that time, they had forgotten we were even there, and were concentrating pretty much on each other.

The pictures you are looking at are the end product of the tite get-together between two shy but very savy girls. It took a lot of effort, but we think it was worth all the work we put into it. Gee Whiz's for sure, these girls will never be timid again. They're laying too much hair using their inhibitions.

SISTERS UNDER THE SKIN

GO GO GIRLS

What makes a few bachelor girls decide to give up the privacy of their own lives to room and live together? Is it loneliness? Insecurity?

We decided to interview the charming residents of the big house on the hill where laughter and musical sounds leaked out in all directions.

PLAY BY THEMSELVES

The girls received the questions politely and didn't tell us to buzz off and mind our own business. Instead, they went out of their ways to be cooperative and give us sensible answers. And, after listening, we couldn't help but wonder who was right, the world or them.

"Living alone is for the birds," Villa said. "Togetherness is more fun.
This way there's never a chance to get bored or lonesome."

"It's my idea of getting to know another person better, without strain," said her pretty roommate. "Mille is very creative and even moody at times, but she never carries it to extremes and when she gets that way, I don't have to tiptoe around either for fear of upsetting her mood. I do my own thing until she's ready to wade out of it and then, if I'm in a funk, she's always there to help talk me out of it."

lonely lovelies

Ginger and Carol are grass-widows. In other words, they're both married to GIs who are presently stationed abroad. Yes, they're lonely for their husbands but they've found a sort of remedy for their loneliness. When they get really hard-up they play act having their men back, each chick taking her turn at playing husband.

Of course one of their favorite scenes in these sultry little fantasies is the love-making part, and boy! do they play it to the hilt! But keep in mind, dear reader, that it's all in fun and essentially simulation, not the real thing. Still and all, they do have the look of total satisfaction, don't they.

Seeing these sprightly sirens leap and gambol and raise a ruckus generally with their high spirited shenanigans, makes you wonder when they have those moodily penitent referred to. They seemed too much alive and in love with living to have time for those withdrawals. But we'll take their word for it. And truth to tell, these are the kind of girls we would like to spend time with, even when they're not up to their usual per. Take a look at the pictures, men. Any for saying no?
